what are these
new crib standards
anyway?

U.S. HOTELS MUST REPLACE ALL IN-SERVICE CRIBS BY DECEMBER 28, 2012

On December 28, 2010 the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission (CPSC) implemented sweeping new crib safety standards for traditional cribs such as those made from steel and wood. In addition to eliminating drop-side cribs they require extensive new structural enhancements and labeling. Under the new guidelines no traditional cribs, both fixed-side and drop-side, may remain in service after December 28, 2012 that are not compliant to these new standards and, as a result, must be replaced. Hence, if you purchase cribs today that do not meet the new Federal standards your investment may be short lived. Foundations[®] is pleased to introduce new traditional wood and steel cribs that are certified compliant to the new CPSC standards. Though mesh and fabric products, such as our play yards, are not affected by the new standards, we have also introduced a complete new line that offers comfort and style previously not available to hotels. All Foundations cribs have been redesigned to address today's safety concerns while providing unparalleled satisfaction to your most discriminating guests. You may rest assured that the Foundations cribs you buy today will provide peace of mind and return on investment for years to come.

Foundations cribs are independently certified by the Juvenile Products Manufacturer's Association (JPMA) that they meet all applicable mandatory and voluntary safety standards published by the CPSC, ASTM, and JPMA.
